THE EDITOR

No series of news-feature articles ever printed in The Gettysburg Times won such general and wide-spread praise as the series of European travel talks recently published in this newspaper and prepared as interviews with the Rev. E. H. Jones, pastor of the Gettysburg Presbyterian church. An unusually large number of commendable expressions from Times readers have been received concerning the articles by the Rev. Mr. Jones.

In this connection and indicating the widespread interest in the series, the following post card came in this morning's mail:

For those who find pleasure in observing the beauties of the heavens and sky, the Northern Cross is now sparkling between the hours of 9 and 10 near the darkened firmament zenith. Blue Vega, "Supreme and alone in her splendor and fire, within the sky kingdom of Lyra the Lyre," is beginning to descend westward from this Northern Cross, formed of five noticeable stars.

The Northern Cross in the constellation Cygnus is not so famous as the Southern Cross, concerning which the poet Samuel Rogers exclaimed: "The four that glorify the night!" However, the five stars forming the Northern Cross are well worth astronomical observation. Deneb or Arid, in the northeastern part of the Cross, is a first magnitude sun. It is so remote from us that we do not appreciate its real brilliance. Albireo sparkles in the southwestern part of this Northern Cross. Between Deneb and Albireo, we see three stars in a row, the arms of the Cross. These three stars are named Epsilon, Gamma and Delta. Certainly Deneb, Albireo, Epsilon, Gamma and Delta form a symmetrical and large outline of stars. It is indeed a veritable firmament Cross.

The roadside courts, where Justices of the Peace hand out fines in accordance with their personal financial needs, are rapidly disappearing from the highways, according to John W. Brehm, president of the Gettysburg Motor Club, which is affiliated with the American Automobile Association.

Mr. Brehm bases this statement on the experiences of many members of the club who have recently returned from lengthy tours in various sections of the country.

"The comparative freedom from annoyance at the hands of the pestiferous tribe of roadside squires cannot but bring joy to motorists," he declared. "The fact that the 1,065 motor clubs affiliated with the A. A. A. now give legal protection to members has exercised a deterrent effect on 'Gyp' justice."

"The real death knell to the roadside court and the ill-guided Justice of the Peace," he continued, "was sounded by the Supreme Court of the United States, when the high tribunal ruled that no person can hold court who has a personal or financial interest in the outcome of the trial."

"Chief Justice Taft held that the fee system, which is the method used in the so-called 'ditch courts,' is not only a violation of the common law, but also is in direct conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, because it is not a (Continued on Second Page.)"

G. A. R. Vet, Lifer, Is Freed to Attend Reunion

Michigan City, Ind., Sept. 13.—Once every year Henry Romine, life term in the Indiana penitentiary here, gets a little vacation of 30 days.

Romine is 81 years old and a Civil War veteran—the only Civil War veteran in the country serving a life term in prison. And every year the prison authorities give him a 30-day parole so that he can attend the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

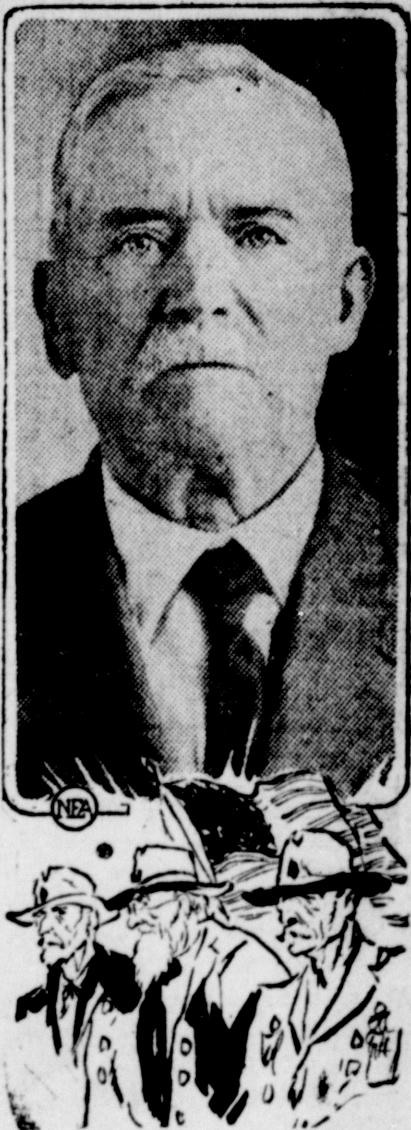

Sixteen years ago Romine, entered prison, convicted of murdering John and George McQuaid in a barroom brawl at Columbus, Ind. For eight years of his sentence he was confined as closely as any other prisoner; then some parole board functionary got the idea that, after all, the country owed a little something to a man who had served it as bravely as Romine had.

So Romine is now heading for Denver, where the G. A. R.'s national encampment of 1928 from Sept. 16 to Sept. 25.

No guard is going with him on his long trip. He will be free to go and come as he pleases until his short vacation is over. Prison officials are completely confident that he will be back when his time is up. Never yet has he betrayed the confidence reposed in him.

A neatly tailored G. A. R. uniform has been obtained for him by prison officials, so that he can appear among his former comrades in regular style. State headquarters of the G. A. R. are paying his expenses. There is nothing left for the old soldier to do but enjoy himself.

Romine served throughout the Civil War with a regiment of Ohio

Several efforts have been made to obtain a pardon or parole for him, but brothers of the slain men have protested each time.

10,000 ATTEND FIREMEN READY FAIR WEDNESDAY FOR CONVENTION

Milling Throng Breaks All Previous Attendance Records, Wednesday.

An overcast sky, which held a constant threat of local thunder-showers, failed to halt the crowd which began flocking to the South Mountain fair at Arendtsville Union park this afternoon, according to reports from the fair grounds. At 1:30 o'clock, the parking field was about half full of automobiles, with others arriving constantly. The fair closes at midnight to night.

Wednesday's throng of patrons broke all previous attendance records, fair officials said, estimating the crowd on the grounds in the evening in excess of 10,000 persons. The previous high attendance mark was approximately 8,000.

The cafeteria fed more persons Wednesday than on the biggest day of any previous fair, and by 8:30 o'clock, Wednesday evening, practically all food prepared for the day had been consumed.

Fiddlers Score
The crowd was so great Wednesday evening that "Gunpowder," the kicking mule, and his three handlers staged two performances instead of one.

The Gettysburg Boys' band won rdded plaudits for their concert Wednesday afternoon and evening. This morning the Fairfield Old Time Fiddlers had a milling throng around them while they scraped off familiar barn dance tunes. They played again this afternoon, and will give a concluding concert to night. An added musical treat for this afternoon and tonight will be the Hanover Knights of Pythias band, one of the best musical organizations in Southern Pennsylvania.

No exhibits will be removed from the buildings until Friday morning so that persons expecting to attend the fair this evening will see the same displays as those who attended Tuesday, the opening day.

10,000 ATTEND FIREMEN READY FAIR WEDNESDAY FOR CONVENTION

Local Department Engages Uniontown Band To Furnish Music In Annual Parade.

Plans for the company's participation in the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Firemen's association convention at Uniontown during the first week in October were completed at a meeting of the Gettysburg fire department, Wednesday evening.

About sixty members of the local company announced their intention of making the trip for which most of the expenses are paid out of the firemen's treasury.

The local "smoke eaters" have engaged the Triangle band, of Uniontown, to furnish music for their division in the parade which is a feature of every annual convention. Valuable prizes are offered for companies in the parade, and the Gettysburg firemen hope to bring home one or two of the awards.

To Have B. B. Team
The company also discussed the formation of a basketball team to represent it during the winter. George Bender was elected manager of the team, with Henry Bream, coach; James B. Aumen, treasurer, and Charles J. Myers, advertising manager.

The company had one of the strongest quintets in Southern Pennsylvania last winter, and played some of the best teams in this vicinity and one or two fast travelling teams. The company will have practically the same lineup this year that it had last season, and is now ready to schedule games both at home and on other floors.

Dewey Collins, John Smick, Charles Utz and Ralph Fisel were elected to membership in the company. In the absence of Earl Deatrick, president, George March, a vice president, presided.

STOCK MARKET

New York, Sept. 13.—(AP)—The stock market displayed a complete reversal of form today selling off sharply in the morning and then rallying briskly after midday. Early declines of 1 to 7 points in the general list and 3 to 14 points in the amusement issues were cut down or wiped out and a long list of pool specialists were bid up 1 to 5 points above yesterday's final quotation. Trading showed a tendency to turn dull on the decline.

MT. ST. MARY'S OPENS FRIDAY

Emmitsburg Institution Starts 122nd Session; President Serves 17 Years.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor B. J. Bradley, president, and members of the council at Mount St. Mary's college have completed arrangements for the opening of the one hundred and twenty-second session to begin Friday morning. The faculty and students will form on the campus and march to the college church where solemn high mass will be sung, Monsignor Bradley, being the celebrant.

Advance registration gives every indication of a heavy enrollment for the coming year, the freshman list at present reaching near 100 new students. This is far beyond the record of any previous years.

110 In Seminary
In the seminary department there are one hundred and ten young men registered which is an increase over last year while the registration in the high school department also shows a decided increase. It is estimated that by the first of next week the enrollment in all three departments will be considerably over 500 which will be a new record for the old mountain institution.

With the beginning of the new session, the Rev. Robert A. McCormick, of Baltimore, will assume the position of registrar of both the college and high school departments.

The Rev. John C. Gordon and Prof. L. L. Hechinger have been added to the faculty for the coming year. The former will be in charge of high school science while Prof. Hechinger, who for a number of years has been on the faculty at Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, will be assigned to the college chemistry department.

FOURTEEN "G" MEN RETURN TO BULLET SQUAD THIS YEAR

Captain John Miller Leads Heavy Contingent To Face Stiff Nine-Game Schedule.

With seven veteran line men and seven backfield letter men as a nucleus, Head Coach Henry Bream of the Gettysburg college football eleven is optimistic over prospects of a most successful season at the battlefield institution.

Heading the list of return letter men is Captain John Miller, 212 pound tackle, hardened and tanned a chocolate brown following a summer's training campaign on the Atlantic seaboard.

The nine-game schedule, six of which are allotted to foreign lots, is the stiffest to be assigned the Orange and Blue in more than fifteen years, and the fourteen letter men are eager to swing into action against such squads as Penn State, Lehigh, Villanova, Bucknell, Western Maryland, Dickinson, Muhlenberg and Franklin and Marshall. American university is the other scheduled game, the opening contest on Memorial field, September 29.

SCORES JUDGE FOR DELAYING BIEVER TRIAL

District Attorney Butt Says He Expects To Try Marylander In November.

District Attorney John P. Butt, this morning, declared, in a statement relative to the postponement of the Biever hearing, that he expected to try the Hagersown man at the November term of court.

A six months' postponement of the hearing was awarded by Justice Hill, Wednesday morning, when, in the absence of District Attorney Butt, Attorney J. Donald Swope, of defense counsel, requested an adjournment until next March. J. Donald Biever, Hagersown, is charged with involuntary manslaughter and driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

District Attorney Butt's statement follows:

"I was in Baltimore on business, Wednesday, and I completely overlooked the date of the Biever hearing. In my judgment I see no sense or reason for Justice of the Peace Hill to continue the case until the time indicated and I expect to try the case at the November term of court. The district attorney is not required to attend all preliminary hearings. In view of the fact that the prosecutor and all the witnesses were present, I can see no reason why the hearing was not held."

The district attorney declared that it was through an oversight that he overlooked the date of the hearing, that his presence was required in Baltimore.

The adjournment was granted by Justice Hill, after Attorney Swope had informed the court that the defendant, a traveling salesman, was ready to leave on an extended business trip and that he did not expect to return to this vicinity until next March.

2 Dead, 1 Dying; Slayer Suicides

New Orleans, Sept. 13.—(AP)—Two persons were dead, one was reported dying and another was seriously wounded today as the result of an attempt by James Guerra, 25, to slay his wife's family in a fit of insane jealousy.

Guerra last night located his estranged wife of three months, Nora Muller Guerra, living with her family in the old French quarter of the city. Failing at reconciliation, Guerra shot and seriously wounded his wife, killed her mother and wounded her brother so badly that he is believed to be dying. He then ended his own life with a bullet in his brain.

Local Rotarian Addresses Club In Littlestown

Dr. M. Hadwin Fischer of the Lutheran theological seminary and a member of the Gettysburg Rotary club was the principal speaker at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Littlestown Rotarians. His subject was "Fellowship."

An interesting feature of the meeting which was in charge of the president, Dr. H. A. Swoeser, was the calling on each member to explain the why and wherefore of the initials of his name, what the initials stood for and how he happened to get his particular Christian name. The responses were in most cases mirth-provoking. The usual singing was enjoyed. Claude A. Bixler, manager of the Bell Telephone company here, was a visitor from the Gettysburg club.

Minister Is Shoe Pitching Star, County

Adams county's champion horse-shoe pitcher is a minister!

Probably his ability to hurl verbal shots from the pulpits of the United Brethren churches he serves had something to do with the Rev. C. M. Ankerbrand, of Biglerville, emerging victorious in the horseshoe pitching contest at the South Mountain Fair, Wednesday afternoon.

The Biglerville minister, competing in a field of more than thirty entrants, was going strong in the semi-finals when he played and eliminated O. W. Jacobs. For winning the singles' event, the Rev. Mr. Ankerbrand received a fine clock, while the runner-up was awarded a piece of decorative pottery.

Loses In Doubles

Although he won the singles' match, the Rev. Mr. Ankerbrand, paired with another minister, the Rev. Ira W. Trostle, of Idaville, lost the doubles' championship to Joe Hess and Dan Bucher by the score of 21 to 19. The pair of winners in the doubles' event were each given a gold pencil.

A special prize of a pair of silver cuff links was won by the county champion, the Rev. Mr. Ankerbrand, for the most rings pitched in a single game. He pegged seven rings in a game against the Rev. Mr. Trostle in the singles.

A fringe crowd gathered around the contestants during the contest. This feature of the fair, which is expected to grow to much larger proportions next year, was staged by George B. Kadel, who lives near the fair grounds.

32 Are Entered

Those entered in the horseshoe pitching contest were Lloyd Cluck, Joe Hess, the Rev. George B. Ely, the Rev. C. M. Ankerbrand, the Rev. Ira W. Trostle, James Reed, Milton Reaver, Robert A. LAWYERS WILL ARGUE OCT. 15 FOR NEW TRIAL

Date Fixed For Arguments On Motion Of Attorney Swope For New Murder Trial.

District Attorney John P. Butt, today announced that he has designated October 15 as the date for argument on the motion of Attorney J. Donald Swope, defense counsel, for a new trial for Mrs. Helen D. Eiker, convicted of second-degree murder for the slaying of her husband, Percy D. Eiker, in July.

Eight reasons in support of his motion for a new trial, filed verbally with Judge D. P. McPherson after the jurors returned a verdict of guilty against his 20-year-old client, have not yet been augmented by Attorney Swope although he reserved the right to file additional reasons after the court's charge to the jury and the testimony in the case is reduced from the stenographic notes.

Says Court "Unfair"

Mr. Swope was out of town today and could not be reached for an expression as to whether or not the move to secure a new trial for his young client would be followed through, but D. C. Stallsmith, uncle of Mrs. Eiker and her constant companion during the recent trial, said a new trial for the woman would be sought. Notice of the date for argument on the defense motion has been served on Mr. Swope.

In the preliminary reasons for a new trial for Mrs. Eiker, Attorney Swope charged, among other things, that the court's charge to the jury was "unfair to the defense and biased in favor of the prosecution."

Jury Asks Leniency

After her trial, Mrs. Eiker repeatedly said she didn't care whether or not she got a new trial, apparently being resigned to whatever sentence the court might impose. If her plea for a new trial is refused, Mrs. Eiker faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in the Eastern Penitentiary. In its verdict, the jury recommended leniency, which recommendation, however, is not binding upon Judge McPherson in passing sentence.

Since the trial, it is said Mrs. Eiker frequently reads the Bible and works on Biblical history. On nice, sunny days, she takes sunbaths in the jail yard, and "she seems in fairly good health although considerably weaker than a normal person due to the arrested lung affliction from which she is suffering."

As before the trial, the youthful prisoner sleeps poorly at night, and does most of her resting in the daytime.

TOURISTS PAY 5 BILLION, YEAR

Traveling Public Spends Large Sum Of Money For General Purposes Yearly.

The following facts and figures should be of particular interest to the people of Gettysburg and Adams county, according to John W. Brehm, president of the Gettysburg motor club. There is no one community in the United States today visited by more tourists than Gettysburg and consequently all merchants share very largely in the enormous business indicated by these facts.

Motorists of the nation spend the staggering sum of over five billion dollars annually with service stations and repair shops according to Mr. Brehm, who bases his statement on figures furnished by the Research Department of the A. A. A.

How Money Is Spent
This sum was divided as follows: Parts and service supplies, $95,000,000; tires for replacement, $925,000,000; fuels and lubricants, $2,350,000,000 and service labor, $1,092,000,000. In 1919 the total amount was $2,125,000,000, while in 1926 it reached $4,815,000,000.

The large amount of money spent in this way does not include the sum chargeable to depreciation and garaging.

Mr. Brehm declared that every repair shop in the United States has an average clientele of 261 motor cars. This statement is based on the 1927 motor vehicle registrations and a total of $9,055 service stations and repair shops.

Mr. Brehm feels that it is for this reason that so many hundreds of thousands of motorists are interested in motor club organizations which continually look after motoring conditions and the personal service motorists receive.

JONES SHATTERS TOURNEY RECORD

Newton, Mass., Sept. 13.—(AP)—Shattering the tournament record with a sensational 70, two under par, Bobby Jones, crushed one-half of the British threat in the national amateur golf championship today when he led John D. Beck, London, by the overwhelming margin of 12 up at the end of the first 18 holes of their 36-hole third round match.

At the rate he was going Jones seemed certain to break all records for decisive defeats in national amateur tournaments.

The other three matches were close and hard fought.

Philadelphia Prepares To Welcome Large Delegation; Adams County Gets Quota.

Adams county has been assigned a minimum of fifty delegates to the Pennsylvania Sabbath School convention, to be held in Philadelphia, October 10, 11 and 12, according to President Knouse of the county organization.

Pennsylvania, this year, with the aid of her largest city and the balance of the state, fully expects to hold the largest Sabbath School convention ever assembled.

Pennsylvania with her 10,609 Protestant Sabbath Schools and her two and a quarter million Sabbath School teachers, officers and pupils even at that has only one in four of her population in the Sabbath School.

Large Enrollment
Yet, with all that, she has one-sixteenth of the entire Sabbath enrollment of the entire world and one-eighth of the United States enrollment.

The state organization has created active auxiliary organizations in the sixty-seven counties of the state, and Adams county is considered one of the most active.

The auditorium in which the convention will be held in Philadelphia will seat ten thousand people, half of which is confidently expected to come from Philadelphia, and the other half from throughout the state.

The program for this convention is to be better than ever before in anticipation of the throng of Sunday School leaders.

The board of directors of the Pennsylvania Sabbath School association are, at their own expense, going into every county this week meeting the county officers and other interested workers in the interest of county work and of the coming Philadelphia convention.

trial by "due process of law." Mr. Brehm asserted that speed trap artists and roadside courts have long been a cause of great inconvenience to America's motor touring army and the gradual elimination of these "blots along the highways" is a tribute to the services of organized motordom.

As an indication of the injustice of these roadside courts, he recalled an incident reported by the A. A. A. where one motorist produced a voucher attesting to the fact that he had paid $10.25 for violating "pages 17 and 18 of the Motor Vehicle Laws."

Love of affection, love of attention and love of power are the three great motive forces of a child's character, says G. H. Estabrooks in an analysis of these factors in the September issue of Hybeia.

Every normal child wants these things and should have them within reason. But each of them is a two-edged sword. A normal amount of affection is due every child but every child is willing to take more than his due if given the chance. He may then develop an abnormal craving for affection, which he will go to any length to satisfy. Similarly every child is entitled to be the center of attention at times but he may easily get the habit of monopolizing it at all times. The craving for power if overfed may produce a little tyrant, Mr. Estabrooks declares.

South Mountain Fair Facts

The three busiest men on the grounds are M. E. Knouse, president of the fair association, who has direct supervision over the cafeteria and other eating places; George Hoffman, who is in charge of commercial exhibits, and Edwin A. Rice, the general manager.

The parking field adjoining the grounds is as smooth as a ballroom floor when compared with the road between Biglerville and Arendtsville. The surface of this highway resembles a huge wash board and occupants of automobiles get the same sensation when traveling between these two places as mother gets when she scrubs the Monday washing.

Not to be out-done by their Republican opponents, the Democratic organization of Adams county had a tent on the grounds Wednesday, and here candidates and party workers met the voters.

Some fine examples of the taxidermist's art are found in the fruit building. Mounted deer racks, black and grey squirrels and even a bear head are on display. One of the finest of these exhibits is a buck head beneath which are the mounted heads of a doe and fawn. A family group, as it were.

Gate-crashers would have no difficulty getting into the fair grounds because there are no enclosing fences, but fair officials, who have men patrolling the grounds to apprehend persons trying to "beat" their way in, say there have been few attempts made to "crash the gate."

Steadfast in their determination to keep the fair free of gambling in any form, the directors ordered the operator of a merchandise wheel from the grounds, Wednesday, when it was shown that he was not giving some award every time the wheel was spun.

Fine Hampshire sheep—two pens of them—were shown by Harry VanDyke, Gettysburg R. D.

In the throng which milled about the grounds Wednesday evening were several lost children, waiting for their parents who were just as anxiously searching for their offspring. Before they were reunited, a veritable game of hide-and-seek was played, with other parents and other children participating.

Workmen of the Metropolitan Edison Electric company installed larger transformers Wednesday to care for the heavy drain of current into the grounds.

The swine department is the largest in the history of the fair. Sixteen exhibitors are showing 120 head of hogs. Roy Ruffensperger is chairman of this department.

In the home economics department is an unusually fine display of hand-painted china, done by Miss Ada Kime, of Gettysburg R. 6. Amateur photography is new in this department.

The cafeteria did a land-office business Wednesday evening, and by 9 o'clock was about eaten out. M. E. Knouse, in charge of the eating place, said he would have to completely restock the larger

DRUGGISTS DECLARE PILE REMEDY WORKS WONDERS

Piles & Hemorrhoids Are Relieved Quick By Simple Method

ONE DRUGGIST SAYS REMEDY CURED HIM

I'm a druggist myself and when I say this new internal way of getting rid of Piles is best I know for I suffered myself for twelve years and during that time tried everything on the shelf," declared Robert Higgins, Ph. G.

"One of the clerks in the store told me how wonderfully these Colic Pile Pills had helped his wife, so I took a bottle home because I was suffering terribly at that time and I want to say they are the finest remedy for this painful affliction I ever heard of, and I often recommend them to customers," continued Mr. Higgins, druggist in Corinth, N. Y. Local druggists here are featuring Colic Pile Pills. Thousands of tests prove this new internal treatment most effective for real and lasting results.

A GREAT DISCOVERY

A famous chemist asked himself one day: Why can't I coat a pill with a substance impervious to gastric juices so it will pass through the stomach into the bowels and then dissolve and release a combination of healing, soothing herbs that reach the real seat of all the trouble—remove the cause, and permanently banish piles and hemorrhoids? Colic Pile Pills are the final result of his research and it certainly is nice to know that at last no matter how long or severely one has suffered, they can forget nasty salves, suppositories, etc., and enjoy the benefits of this simple, harmless, scientific method. Even delicate old men and women troubled with piles, sit, walk and sleep in comfort without pain in a few hours in many instances and report complete relief in a few days. Colic Pile Pills improve the work of the largest laboratory of finest ingredients. Several local druggists offer to gladly refund the 75 cents a regular bottle costs if they fail to relieve completely within the worst or chronic case. Certainly no one, young or old, should suffer another day. Just a couple of Colic Pile Pills will give you full relief in a few days. If your own druggist hasn't Colic Pile Pills, send 75c to Colic Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., with name and address for full size bottle, 40 tablets, plain wrapper, full directions, return mail—adv.

GRAY HAIR INDICATES BAD HEALTH EXPERT DECLARES

Gray Hair Is Dead Hair. He Proves It Can Be Revived Again

TONIC STARTS YOUTHFUL COLOR RETURNING AGAIN

A newly discovered scalp tonic banishes itchy eczema, dandruff and falling hair and while doing this, users notice in amazement that the youthful, original color returns to their gray hair, almost as if by magic.

Primarily intended only as a tonic to put the hair roots, scalp and pigment glands in vigorous condition—it has followed that with restoration of healthy conditions the hair revives and changes back from gray to its natural shade of brown, red, auburn, black or blonde as the case may be. What is more becoming than nature's own choice of color to match your style? No one wants an old-fashioned dye.

It seems a doctor asked himself this question:—If I can stimulate various organs of the body with a tonic, why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive those inactive glands so nature will resume putting pigment into the hair tubes of people who are gray? His search led to endless experiments but the reader may now obtain at drug stores here, the tonic finally perfected, under the name of Lea's Hair Tonic. Thousands of exhaustive scientific tests prove Lea's Hair Tonic absolutely unvarying in results and harmless even if used for many years. As a test, one may apply to small spot on scalp a few days and watch results. Unlike old-time dyes, Lea's Hair Tonic is applied in as far as possible to the scalp only. (You can dip your hair in a whole basin of Lea's and not change the color, but apply as directed with the finger tips to hair roots and scalp and it will restore original color all the way from beneath the scalp to the very tips.) The doctor used to demonstrate this to prove Lea's wasn't a dye. It doesn't stain—experts cannot detect its use. Shampoo as often as desired. Complete satisfaction guaranteed. Judging was finished late Wednesday afternoon, and premium winners will be announced in The Gettysburg Times within the next few days.

An excellent place from which to get a bird's-eye view of the number of cars parked in the field adjoining the park and the serpentine line of automobiles rolling into the park during the evening is from the top of the ferris wheel.

Motor patrolmen had their hands full directing traffic to and from the grounds Wednesday afternoon and evening. The one-way bridge over the Conewago creek was one of the impediments to traffic; another was the fact that ticket sellers could not make change fast enough to keep the line of cars moving.

Heidelberg Duels Fought Secretly

HEIDELBERG (AP)—Any young man seen walking the streets of Heidelberg with a gash on his head or face must do some tall explaining. The police have orders to take him to police headquarters, where he must narrate the genesis of his "accident."

Republican Germany is determined to put an end to student dueling, once the favorite sport of aristocratic student fraternities. Century-old customs, however, are not to be eradicated by a simple ordinance, and secret dueling continues.

A fresh gash in the face or on the head is presumptive evidence that a duel has been fought. The students have developed a wonderful technique of alibis, however, and many a time the duelist gets away with his "proof" that he fell into a glass door or was accidentally struck by falling glass. Nevertheless the vigilance of the police has done much to reduce dueling to a minimum.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Local Miscellany.—N. H. Muselman has purchased from the S. A. Troxell estate 38 feet on East Middle street where the old Culp blacksmith shop stood, but which was removed during the past week. Mr. Muselman will erect thereon a fine dwelling house.

Quite a number of the men had their faces cut, some had teeth knocked out, while others suffered severe bruises from being pounded or kicked.

Display of China Asters.—Mrs. Charles Reinwald, of Emmitsburg, sister of the Misses Danner, of this place, takes great pride in raising flowers and is quite successful.

The Chronicle of last week in noting her display says:

Mrs. Charles Reinwald, among other Emmitsburg ladies, is a great admirer of china asters and in her extensive garden, located so that all may enjoy the beautiful flowers it contains, is one of the finest displays of these richly colored flowers seen in this locality for a long time.

In one bed are massed in a pleasing manner hundreds of asters representing it would seem, almost every possible hue of purple, red and pink and making a combination of color decidedly rich and effective.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

THE LITTLE BOY WHO DIDN'T DIE

Oh, little lad of long ago,
Oh, boy who used to be,
Sometime despite my years, I know
That you are still with me!
Sometimes in minutes, fleeting,
rare,

I hear your footsteps on the stair.

Sometimes upon the sandy shore

Beneath the summer sky,

As in the years which are no more,

You watch the ships go by,
And then, and strange that this should be,

You skim flat pebbles on the sea.

And now and then when care's

asleep
And worry reconciled,
The dreadful bonds of time you leap.

Oh, happy-hearted child;
At some delight which nonsense brings,

That old time boyish laughter

rings!

The man is here, and people say
The lad's forever gone,
But 'neath these temples silvered

gray
I know you're living on,
For often when I'm all alone

You plainly make your presence known.

Little Jack Rabbit

By David Cady

In his travels Little Jack Rabbit soon came to Midgetville, or Tintown, as some people called it. All of a sudden a clock began to strike, and as it stopped at 13, along came a little dwarf in a wagon. Unharnessing his horse, he slipped off the bridge and led him into a field to eat the fresh green grass. Then, with a smile, he invited the bunny boy to go with him to the village.

Goodness me, the tallest church steeple reached no higher than the little rabbit's waist, and the clock on the town hall wasn't as big as the watch dear Uncle Lucky had given him.

"This is no place for me," said the little bunny, with a grin "I'll have to sleep under a tree, for there's no house large enough for me to squeeze into."

"About a mile from here stands a poor laborer's cottage," answered the tiny dwarf. "He has a room to spare. Maybe he'll give you a night's lodgings."

So off hopped the little rabbit and on reaching the cottage he tapped, once, two, three, just like that, on the front door.

"Come in," cried the laborer. "Can you give me a bed in which to rest my tired legs," said the weary little rabbit.

"I have a straw cot to which you are welcome," answered the poor laborer. And he showed the little bunny to a small room at the head of the stairs. It wasn't long before the little rabbit was sound asleep, when, all of a sudden, at the stroke of midnight, a little fairy flew in through the open window.

"Wake up, little bunny. The moon is so bright. It hangs in the sky Like a lantern all white. It brightens the dell down on a fallen tree and patiently waited for the fairies to appear. And he did not have long to wait. Some came riding on moths and others on dragon flies, and although the forest was dark, the tiny fireflies with their glowing lanterns made the dancing place almost as bright as day. Pretty soon the King of the Fairies stepped off his throne and came over to speak to our little bunny. "Nearby in the wood," whispered the Fairy King, "lives a wicked ogre who has cast a charm over the queen's son," and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

And buttercup drum.
Ho, ho! and ha, ha!
By the moon and the star,

Rubbing his eyes, the little rabbit pulled on his shoes and hopped quietly down the stairs so as not to wake the tired laborer. Now the little rabbit had never seen a fairy dance, for it is always held at 13 o'clock, and nobody I ever knew is wide awake at that hour. However, the little bunny sat

HORSEBACK IS POPULAR WITH D. C. NOTABLES

Squeak Of Saddle Leather And Pounding Of Hoofs Is Heard Frequently In Washington.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The squeak of saddle leather and the pounding of galloping hoofs in the secluded paths of the capital reveal the whereabouts of many a personage these fair days.

There are few departments of the government that aren't represented along the byways of Rock Creek and Potomac parks, few embassies that don't send an ambassador or a ministry or a secretary out to join the mounted parade on fair days.

Mixed in with these is a goodly portion of the season's debutantes. Senator Borah of Idaho is one of the most persistent riders in the capital. Even on days when his duties of legislative business are heaviest he may be seen in the park for an hour or two early in the morning.

Mrs. Dawes Is Fan
Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the vice-president, is a faithful rider, as is Mrs. Medill McCormick, recent winner of the Republican nomination for congress from Chicago, and her three children, Katrina, Medill, Jr., and Bazy, all of whom keep their own ponies in Washington.

Hon. and Mrs. Vincent Massey, the Canadian minister and his wife; Sir Esme and Lady Isabella Howard of the British embassy, Don Orestes Ferrara, Cuban ambassador; Leandro Padilla, Spanish ambassador, and Count and Countess Szechenyi of the Hungarian legation are among the members of the diplomatic corps who are seen at

FARQUHAR POTATO DIGGERS For Large and Small Growers -

The Farquhar Elevator Digger contains every modern device for rapid, clean digging. Puts the potatoes in a neat compact row, ready for easiest and quickest handling. They have been proven right by the hardest kind of field operation.

The Farquhar is the original rigid tongue digger—can be backed, held over the row when digging on hillside—and is light of draft. Built with broad front roller or two wheel front truck. May be equipped with level or hillside cleats; also road rim.

We also build the "Success Junior," the plow type digger for the smaller grower—the farmer's choice. Illustrated Catalog, describing both types of diggers, sent to any grower.

The "Success Junior" for the small grower least several times a week along the bridge paths.

A Daily Rider

Edouard de Stree, first secretary of the Belgian embassy, is a daily rider and is generally considered one of the best in diplomatic circles. Giuseppe Catalani, counselor of the Italian embassy, and Capitano di Fregata, Alberto Lai, the Italian naval attaché, complete the list of the regular riders from the foreign households.

The three daughters of Dwight F. Davis, secretary of war, are frequent riders of the paths whenever they are in Washington. For the past month Alice, the eldest, has been very busy with her debutante affairs, and Cynthia has been away at school, but the youngest, Helen, has been a regular devotee.

Pierce Butler, associate justice of the United States supreme court, takes a daily canter, while Col. U. S. Grant, director of the office of public buildings and public parks, makes daily tours of inspection in Rock Creek park, the Mall and the other parks over which he has jurisdiction.

Familiar Figures

Other familiar figures are Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Jr., wife of the representative from New York; William D. Mitchell, solicitor general of the United States; Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance corporation and a member of the Federal Loan bureau; Mrs. Elmer Schlesinger, Washington society woman, whose home was accepted for the temporary White House while the president's mansion was being repaired last summer; Col. William J. Donovan, assistant to the attorney general; Irwin E. Laughlin, regent of the Smithsonian Institution, and Breckinridge Long, international lawyer and former assistant secretary of state.

Shipping Board's Craft Is Imperiled

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 12.—(AP)—How they battled desperately against heavy seas that broke over the deck of the Shipping Board freight steamer Lake Inglenook, in a strong northeaster 110 miles southeast of here Monday, was related Tuesday by three of the ship's sailors, who were brought to a hospital here for treatment. The ship anchored off Mayport Monday night because of the rough sea, but yesterday succeeded in reaching a port in the St. John's River.

Two other sailors, who suffered minor injuries, remained aboard the vessel, which put out for Baltimore with a cargo of sulphate.

It left Texas City last Wednesday. The men were injured when three waves rolled over the deck, throwing them violently against the side of the ship, which is of 1800 tons and 261 feet in length.

WORD SWORDS

SAVANNAH, Ga.—Many business men today apparently depend largely on efficient stenographers for spelling correctness. In a "spelling bee" in the Kiwanis club here simple words such as "usable," "dependable," "visitor," and "autumn" proved swords to slay the "boosters" right and left. "Innuendo" felled one of the two survivors.

COURT CONDUCT TIP EASES MINDS

American Debutantes Congratulate Themselves That They Emerged Triumphant!

LONDON (AP)—American debutantes are congratulating themselves on the fact that none of their number who was presented at the recent courts disgraced herself by tripping, or failing to curtsy or losing her feathers at the crucial moment when she faced the king and queen.

For days preceding the courts, London newspapers devote much of their space to "Do's and Don'ts for Debs."

Here are some of them:

"On the night of the court, when you are going to be presented to King George and Queen Mary, don't be embarrassed by the gentleman in black silk breeches just inside the door of Buckingham palace. Sweep past him. His faint resemblance to the king has chilled many a young heart for a moment, but the king doesn't answer his own door."

Fear Slipping

"Don't worry about slipping when you curtsy. A thousand other debutantes are worrying more than you, but the carpet in front of the throne is specially thick and clinging."

"Don't use any scent. The queen dislikes it, and her smile might show it."

"When you go to court don't let the excitement make you lose your appetite. The queen doesn't like fainting debutantes. And a nice little dinner is a better investment than a tiara."

"When you go to Ascot, the great royal race meet and glittering fashion parade, don't expect Queen Mary to make a bee-line towards you, in spite of the gracious smile she gave you at the court. Race meets are not her long suit anyway."

Women Pictures In Tomb Ordered

CHAILLY-EN-BIERE, France (AP)—A turret that is a tomb still attracts attention on the Chateau-villard estate, near here, adjoining the Forest of Fontainebleau, but guidebooks do not tell the story that makes it interesting.

The Count of Chateaufillard rests in the great, tower-like mausoleum but he was placed there only after a lawsuit. His will provided for the erection of the tomb, just as it exists, but added that on the walls around him should be placed the pictures of a dozen beautiful women with whom he had had notorious love affairs. His wife and children balked at that and the story of his life, told in court, furnished Paris with gossip for a year, in 1870.

The count's exploits in jumping, horseback, from the window of the Jockey club to the street below, killing his horse, convinced the court he was abnormal, much more than did his love of handsome women, and the widow was authorized to forget to hang her rivals' pictures in her husband's tomb.

Outside the mausoleum, in accordance with the count's will, are buried his horse, his dogs and his monkey.

Motorists Besiege State Government With Requests For Low Numbers On Plates.

Officials of the Fisher administration at the present time are faced by one of the problems requiring the exercise of all the diplomacy of which they are capable. It is apportionment of low license numbers among automobile owners for 1929.

The number of tags reserved for special distribution has increased annually. Now the first 10,000 tags as well as the first 1,000 of the "A" series are reserved for distribution to persons who are insistent upon getting low numbers. Even so, there are a dozen requests for every number reserved.

GLORIOUS BETSY
NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS

An all-night card game is drawing to a close in the old Sweet Springs Inn. Preston, one of the players, astonishes his companions by offering as his final stake the miniature of Betsy Patterson. While he is boasting that she herself was the donor a stranger leaps through the window, challenging the remark. A fight ensues in which the skilled swordsman, Preston, is wounded. His opponent goes on his way with the miniature. In the woods he surprises the lovely Betsy reading in a book. He demands to know what she is doing there.

"I came for a very early morning walk—with cousin Mary, and Sir Henry, and Mr. Blake and Mr. Calhoun. They're over there, some place." Betsy waved a white arm in the general direction of the path. "They dared me to go wading and—I did. She dropped the big hat and shoes beside her and sat down on a rock and curled the bare feet up under her skirt."

"So, you have been walking with Sir Henry, and Monsieur Calhoun and Monsieur Blake."

"Yes. It's too bad you couldn't come with us—but then."

"No, I thank you—not with them. Do not place me with those idiots." He turned away haughtily, his meticulous English making his words sound even more stilted. "Thank fortune, I have never been fool enough to fall in love."

"Oh," Betsy smiled and then quickly assumed a serious expression as the man faced about. "Well, there are some men so well satisfied that they congratulate themselves even on their own imitations." The proud, patrician head turned a pure Grecian profile and looked very haughty, indeed. The sun, warming now to the toils of the day, came breaking through and caught the gleaming beauty of rich, auburn hair and with its own alchemy turned the headlights to gold.

"So!" La Vert stopped pacing and stood before that woodland goddess who looked as though she had descended from Mount Olympus just to spend one day at Sweet Springs.

"Yes," Betsy remarked with some little display of temper, "the vanity of all men is simply unspeakable—really quite past my understanding." She broke off on a leaf from an overhanging branch and twisted it idly in her tapering, white fingers.

"It is evidently not the only matter that is past the understanding of Mademoiselle Patterson," La Vert exclaimed sharply.

"Oh! That was very rude," the goddess flung the scarred leaf from her sharply.

"You do not seem to see the danger—" La Vert began.

"Please don't show it to me then," Betsy exclaimed, laughing. "To point out a danger to a woman is to add another charm to the temptation." Now she laughed clearly, with a rich treble that set the birds to answering and the hills to throwing back reply. "Why don't you talk?" she hurried on, not waiting for an answer. "Surely, you're not doing yourself the honor to be annoyed with me?"

"Haven't I cause?" La Vert spoke quickly.

"Certainly not! Besides, you are taking an unwarrantable liberty."

"I am supposed to be your instructor."

"Oh! Only my French tutor—" "And, as such, it is my duty to see that you do not—"

"Ouch!" Betsy jumped down from her perch and made a little grimace as her feet struck the ground. "Go for walks," she took up the sentence where La Vert had left off, "before breakfast, with other gentlemen." She pulled her stockings from his pocket and rolled them into a little ball. "Really," she turned on him scornfully, "if I thought such behavior scandalous, and the pupils were mine—instead of preaching like an old maid, I'd resign."

But La Vert's face clouded. "Why did you not tell me you were taking a walk—with these stupid people?"

"Why should I tell you? Furthermore, you certainly were not about. And as for the others—they found the matter out for themselves—and they came with me." The goddess tossed her flaming head.

"Sacre!"

"What!"

"I did not speak!" La Vert turned his back.

"O, you story-teller, you 'did'!" Betsy smiled and smoothed down the frilled bodice and draped her light chenille shawl about her shoulders.

"I did not," La Vert contradicted sharply.

"You did—you swore! I don't know what it means, but I know it was a swear because it gave me a perfect thrill."

"If you had taken me with you this morning—or waited for me," La Vert declared heatedly, "the whole complexion of this affair might be changed."

"I know it! And it's going to be much worse, I promise you," Betsy nodded her head vigorously. "That's why I didn't. I prefer the complexion of it as it is. Besides, one can't invite one's tutor with one's friends."

"Pardon!" La Vert turned away. "O, I don't mean that I wish you were not a tutor," Betsy veered quickly, realizing that she had wounded La Vert's feelings and wishing to make up for the hurt that she had not intended. But in another minute she was biting her tongue for having said the words, for the tutor faced her, his eyes bright with happiness.

"Do you?" he questioned eagerly. "But you must remember, I am a man as well as a tutor." He came and stood beside her, gazing into the deep wells of her eyes that turned violet in their seriousness.

"Ah, if you were a real man," Betsy shook her head slowly, "you would be in France, in the army—under the greatest general in the world." She stared off into the woods dreamily, not seeing the faint smile that flitted across the face of her companion. "Just think of your Napoleon," she murmured.

"His power, his strength—the ambition which made of a poor Lieutenant the first Consul of France."

"But love—is not that greater than ambition?" the tutor questioned pleadingly, catching one of the fair hands that toyed with the fringes of the shawl. "O, Betty, say that it is."

"Miss Betsy, if you please!" Betsy tossed her head and drew herself up imperiously, pulling her hand away quickly.

"Miss Betsy—a thousand pardons," La Vert bowed humbly, but still with that faintly amused smile.

"Sacre!" Betsy's foot had come into contact with a sharp stone.

"Miss Patterson!" La Vert looked up in horrified amazement. "Ah! Nice French you are teaching me. I thought it was a swear," she gurgled. "Don't you think you ought to be ashamed of yourself? Do you think that anyone who uses such dreadful language has any right to correct a lady just because she goes for a walk? Now, apologize at once, sir. Promise me you'll never scold or preach or be angry or say any dreadful cross things to me again."

"I promise," La Vert swore faithfully, smiling.

"Then—I shall hate you," Betsy tossed her head provocatively.

"What!" the tutor exclaimed, puzzled.

"Yes! You have no more backbone than a feather in the wind," Betsy sniffed disdainfully.

"So!" La Vert turned away haughtily.

"That's right," Betsy taunted him. "Now, get into a temper. Oh, woman is to add another charm to the temptation." Now she laughed clearly, with a rich treble that set the birds to answering and the hills to throwing back reply. "Why don't you talk?" she hurried on, not waiting for an answer. "Surely, you're not doing yourself the honor to be annoyed with me?"

"Haven't I cause?" La Vert spoke quickly.

"Certainly not! Besides, you are taking an unwarrantable liberty."

"I am supposed to be your instructor."

"Oh! Only my French tutor—" "And, as such, it is my duty to see that you do not—"

"Ouch!" Betsy jumped down from her perch and made a little grimace as her feet struck the ground. "Go for walks," she took up the sentence where La Vert had left off, "before breakfast, with other gentlemen." She pulled her stockings from his pocket and rolled them into a little ball. "Really," she turned on him scornfully, "if I thought such behavior scandalous, and the pupils were mine—instead of preaching like an old maid, I'd resign."

But La Vert's face clouded. "Why did you not tell me you were taking a walk—with these stupid people?"

"Why should I tell you? Furthermore, you certainly were not about. And as for the others—they found the matter out for themselves—and they came with me." The goddess tossed her flaming head.

"Sacre!"

"What!"

"I did not speak!" La Vert turned his back.

"O, you story-teller, you 'did'!" Betsy smiled and smoothed down the frilled bodice and draped her light chenille shawl about her shoulders.

"I did not," La Vert contradicted sharply.

"You did—you swore! I don't know what it means, but I know it was a swear because it gave me a perfect thrill."

"If you had taken me with you this morning—or waited for me," La Vert declared heatedly, "the whole complexion of this affair might be changed."

"I know it! And it's going to be much worse, I promise you," Betsy nodded her head vigorously. "That's why I didn't. I prefer the complexion of it as it is. Besides, one can't invite one's tutor with one's friends."

"Pardon!" La Vert turned away.
